

Notes to help you complete this form

We can grant an exemption from paying child support for a child when:

- Another person has been convicted of a sex offence, or
- Another person has been proved before the Youth Court to have committed a sex offence, or
- It is likely that another person has committed a sex offence and, the child is likely to have been conceived as a result.

A conviction is not required before an exemption can be granted. However, we do need to be satisfied that an offence occurred.
