About this guide

If you're reading this guide, you'll be familiar with:

- accounting bases
- filing frequencies
- completing and filing GST returns
- making adjustments
- dealing with straightforward exemptions
- winding up your business.

This guide covers some infrequent and/or complex GST issues which only apply to a limited number of registered persons, or only occur under certain conditions.

There may still be some situations we have not covered here.

For more help:

- go to our website ird.govt.nz/gst
- read our GST Guide - IR375
- call us on 0800 377 776.

Part 1 - Adjustments

Change of accounting basis

You may want to change your GST accounting basis to suit your business situation.

Make sure you're eligible to use the accounting basis you want to change to.

- In myIR, go to your GST account > More > Manage account > Update GST account details
- Select the accounting basis you want to change to.

We'll contact you within 15 working days to confirm the date the change comes into effect.

You'll need to adjust your next GST return for any outstanding debtors and creditors:

- For GST returns in myIR, add any debit and/or credit adjustments in the 'Change of accounting basis' fields.
- For paper returns add in your debit and/or credit adjustments in the 'Change of accounting basis' Boxes then copy the figures into Boxes 9 and 13 of your GST return.

Making adjustments for debtors and creditors

• From payments to invoice

If GST on debtors is more than GST on creditors, include a debit adjustment for the difference. myIR GST return > Debit adjustments > Change of accounting basis > net amount.

If GST on creditors is more than GST on debtors, include a credit adjustment for the difference. myIR GST return > Credit adjustments > Change of accounting basis > net amount.

For paper returns show the net amount you have worked out in either the - Debit adjustments Box 9 or Credit adjustments Box 13.

Note: For an entity in receivership or liquidation, the liquidator, receiver or administrator cannot change the accounting basis from payments to invoice.

• From payments to hybrid

Calculate the GST on debtors. myIR GST return > Debit adjustments > Change of accounting basis > amount. For paper returns include the debit adjustment in Box 9 of your return.

• From invoice to payments

If GST on debtors is more than GST on creditors, include a credit adjustment for the difference. myIR GST return Credit adjustments > Change of accounting basis > net amount. If GST on creditors is more than GST on debtors, include a debit adjustment for the difference. myIR GST return > Debit adjustments > Change of accounting basis > net amount.

For paper returns show the net amount you have worked out in either the - Debit adjustments Box 9 or Credit adjustments Box 13.

• From invoice to hybrid

Calculate the GST on creditors. myIR GST return > Debit adjustments > Change of accounting basis > amount. If filing by paper include the debit adjustment in Box 9 of your return.

• From hybrid to payments

Calculate the GST on debtors. myIR GST return > Credit adjustments > Change of accounting basis > amount. For paper returns include the credit adjustment in Box 13 of your return.

• From hybrid to invoice

Calculate the GST on creditors. myIR GST return > Credit adjustments > Change of accounting basis > amount. For paper returns include the credit adjustment in Box 13 of your return.

Assets kept after you cancel your GST registration

When you cancel your registration, you must make an adjustment in your final GST return to include the value of any assets you keep from your taxable activity. This does not apply to assets that qualify to be excluded from your taxable activity.

The adjustment amount is 3/23 of the open (current) market value of the assets. For assets bought before 1 October 1986, the value will be the lesser of the cost price and the open market value.

If a retained asset has been used for business, and private or exempt use, you must make a debit adjustment based on the percentage of business use, at market value.

The adjustment for a mixed-use asset for a property developer will be equivalent to returning GST at full market value, offset by any input tax not already claimed.

You must return the GST on the value of the asset regardless of your accounting basis.

myIR GST return > Debit adjustment > Assets kept after cancelling registration > amount. For paper returns include the debit adjustment in Box 9 of your return.

Once you have made the adjustment, you do not need to return GST on the asset in the future. It does not matter what you do with the assets after you've filed your final return.

Example

Charlie was registered for GST and had a taxi business. He retired on 30 November and kept his taxi for personal use.

The value of the vehicle based on current market value was $17,250.

In his final GST return he included 3/23 of $17,250 ($2,250) as a debit adjustment for assets kept after cancelling registration.

Note: If you do not make an adjustment for an asset you have retained, you will remain liable to pay GST on any future sale or disposal even though you may no longer be GST registered.

Part 2 - Exempt supplies

Exempt supplies are goods and services which are not subject to GST. You do not include these supplies in your GST return.

Donated goods-services

If goods or services are donated to a not-for-profit organisation, they cannot charge GST if they sell them later.

Example

A car dealer gives a car to a church. The car is used by the church for 2 years before selling it. The sale of the car is exempt.

A not-for-profit organisation cannot claim a GST credit for expenses relating to supplying donated goods and services.

For example, an opportunity shop charity selling only donated clothing cannot claim GST credits on the shop expenses, such as rates, electricity, or maintenance. If this was the charity's only activity, it would not even register for GST.

However, if the charity also sells purchased goods, GST may be claimed on the expenses directly related to those goods. All other expenses must be apportioned between the exempt and taxable supply use.

For more information go to Income tax and GST for not-for-profits

Financial services

These include:

- paying or collecting any amount of interest
- mortgages and other loans
- bank fees
- securities such as stocks and shares
- providing credit under a credit contract
- exchanging currency (for example, changing US$ into NZ$)
- arranging or agreeing to do any of the above (for example, mortgage broking)
- financial options
- provision or transfer of ownership of a financial option
- deliverable future contracts
- non-deliverable future contracts.

For more information see our Tax Information Bulletin (TIB), Vol 16, No 10 (November 2004).

Financial planning fees cover

The various types of fees charged by financial advisers for financial planning services they provide.

Financial planning fees subject to GST

Services relating to initial planning fees, monitoring fees, evaluation fees and replanning fees.

Financial planning fees not subject to GST

Services relating to implementation fees, administration fees and switching fees exempt from GST.

For more information see Tax Information Bulletin (TIB), Vol 13, No 7 (July 2001).

Renting a residential dwelling

GST cannot be charged on the rent for a residential dwelling. A landlord cannot claim any GST on dwelling expenses, such as maintenance, rates and insurance.

If a residential dwelling is sold as part of a taxable activity, and it was rented for at least 5 years beforehand, the sale is an exempt supply.

If a property developer acquires a property for the principal purpose of making a taxable supply and then subsequently rents the property out, a change-of-use adjustment may be required.

Residential accommodation under a head lease

A tenant, the head lessee, has overall responsibility as set out in the lease with the landlord. This type of lease would most likely exist for a large multi-tenanted building.

The supply of residential property for lease under a head lease is an exempt supply, if the property is to be used for the principal purpose of residential accommodation, unless all the following apply:

- the supplier and recipient agree the exemption does not apply
- the supply was made under a lease entered into before 16 May 2000
- previous supplies were treated as taxable.

Penalty interest

Interest charges on overdue accounts are treated as exempt supplies.

For example, if you sell goods to another supplier on a 30, 60 or 90 day account basis and the account becomes overdue, any penalty interest chargeable on the non-payment should not be included in your GST return.

Fines and penalties imposed for an offence created by statute are not subject to GST. For example, parking fines imposed by the court or local authorities as infringement fees are penalties for offences against the Transport Act 1962.

Supply of fine metals

The sale of fine metal by a dealer, or anyone importing fine metal is an exempt supply.

The exception is when newly refined fine metal is supplied by a refiner to a dealer as an investment item, then it is a zero-rated supply.

Fine metal is any form of:

- gold with a fineness of not less than 99.5%
- silver with a fineness of not less than 99.9%
- platinum with a fineness of not less than 99%.

Part 3 - Zero-rated supplies

Zero-rated supplies are supplies not subject to GST in certain situations. A rate of 0% applies to these supplies.

Copyrights and patents

Services relating to copyrights, patents, and similar property, which apply outside New Zealand are zero-rated.

Example

A New Zealand publishing company has the copyright on a New Zealand author's book. The company sells the overseas copyright to another New Zealand company. Because the other company will be publishing and selling the book overseas (performing a service), the fee for the right is zero-rated.

Transport of household goods in NZ

Transport of household goods in New Zealand is zero-rated if:

- the services are supplied to a non-resident outside New Zealand at the time they are performed
- the goods are for home consumption under the Customs and Excise Act 1996
- the arrangement for the services is made before the goods enter New Zealand, and
- the services are expected to be completed within 28 days of the entry of the goods.

Duty-free goods

Goods purchased from duty-free shops by international travellers are zero-rated when a retailer:

- sells goods to a tourist and arranges to send the items overseas to them
- arranges to send the items to an overseas customer
- arranges to send goods to the airport for a traveller to pick up at the time of departure.

Goods sold by duty-free shops are zero-rated if they are:

- licensed as export warehouses, and
- operating within the Customs processing area at international airports.

GST may be payable to Customs upon entry of goods to New Zealand.

Exported vessels (boats and aircrafts)

The purchase of vessels capable of being exported from New Zealand under their own power can be zero-rated.

This includes:

- goods incorporated into or used up as part of servicing a boat or aircraft being exported
- services provided directly in connection with an exported boat or aircraft.

Exported goods

Goods may qualify for zero-rating if they are or going to be exported in your name.

Exported goods include:

- items not requiring export entry, valued less than $1,000 - you must have proof you have exported or will export them
- stores supplied to aircraft and ships for use outside New Zealand.

Timeframe for exporting

If you have entered goods for export, they must be exported within 28 days of the time of supply, unless we have agreed to an extension.

Aircraft and boats can be zero-rated if they are exported:

- from New Zealand under their own power within 60 days of the recipient taking possession, and
- full documentation is provided to us.

Goods that were to be exported but are destroyed, die or cease to exist from circumstances outside the control of both the supplier and recipient, are zero-rated.

First sale - refined metal

When newly-refined fine metal (gold, silver, platinum) is supplied by a refiner to a dealer as an investment item, it is a zero-rated supply.

Goods not in NZ at the time of supply

Goods located outside New Zealand, which are not going to be imported into New Zealand, are zero-rated.

Services performed outside New Zealand

Services performed outside New Zealand are zero-rated.

For example, if a NZ singer performs overseas, they will charge GST at 0%.

Remote services supplied from outside New Zealand

Non-resident businesses are not required to charge and return GST on remote services, including online services, supplied to New Zealand GST-registered businesses. They are also not required to provide taxable supply information.

A non-resident business can treat the supply as zero-rated, taxed at 0%, to claim back New Zealand GST on the costs incurred in making zero-rated supplies to GST-registered businesses.

If you receive a zero-rated remote service from a non-resident business, you may need to make an adjustment if you use the service for something other than your taxable activity.

If you estimate an acquired service will be used less than 95% in your taxable activity or discover in a later return period your actual use of the service is less than 95%, you'll need to adjust GST for the non-taxable use. Work out the GST that would've been charged on the service if it was not zero-rated and adjust for the proportion of non-taxable use.

Services relating to goods to be exported

Services performed directly in connection with goods that are, or will be, entered for export are zero-rated.

Example

A New Zealand fruit grower exports 1,000 crates of fruit. The offshore recipient wants to ensure the quality of the fruit. He contracts a New Zealand horticultural firm to inspect the fruit independently and prepare a report. This service is zero-rated.

Services relating to portable personal property

Information services provided directly in connection with portable personal property are zero-rated.

Example

Electronic equipment is sent to New Zealand from Germany for testing. The test results are collected, analysed and sent back to Germany. These services are zero-rated.

Services supplied to non-residents outside New Zealand

Services are zero-rated when supplied to a non-resident who is outside New Zealand when the service is supplied.

Example

Legal advice given to a person living in Australia by a lawyer who is resident in New Zealand is zero-rated.

Services zero-rated but carried out in New Zealand

Land outside New Zealand

Services connected directly with land or buildings located outside New Zealand, for example, architectural, real estate and legal services, are zero-rated.

Example

A New Zealand architect designs a building to be constructed on an overseas property for an overseas client. The charge for this service is zero-rated.

Goods outside New Zealand

Zero-rating applies to services carried out directly in connection with goods situated outside New Zealand.

Example

A New Zealand insurance company gives cover to a car located outside New Zealand. The premiums are zero-rated.

Some financial services

Supplies of financial services can be zero-rated to recipients who:

- are registered for GST
- make 75% or more of their supplies as taxable supplies in a 12-month period.

You can elect to zero-rate these supplies in a GST return by doing 1 or both of the following:

- returning zero-rated supplies
- claiming expenses relating to the supplies.

You can also elect by notifying us before the end of the taxable period you first choose to use the election in. You can do this by sending us a message in myIR.

For more information about the zero-rating of financial services see GST guidelines for working with the zero-rating rules for financial services in our Tax Information Bulletin.

Tax Information Bulletin (TIB) Vol 16, No 10 (November 2004).

Some imported services

You are required to charge and return GST on any services you import into New Zealand. These can include services you acquire while you're outside New Zealand. But, if these services can only take place outside New Zealand, they may be zero-rated. The exception is for services which are intangible in nature.

Specialised tools

New Zealand manufacturers can zero-rate income from tools used to manufacture goods for export, if the tools are:

- used in New Zealand solely for the exported good
- supplied to a non-GST registered non-resident.

Tools include jigs, patterns, templates, dies, punches and similar machine tools.

The tools do not have to be exported with the goods to be zero-rated.

For more information see the Specialised tools section of our webpage Zero-rated supplies

Land transactions

A land transaction must be zero-rated when made by a GST-registered person, if the supply wholly or partly includes land, and:

- is made to another registered person
- the recipient acquires the goods with the intention of using them for making taxable supplies
- it is not intended to be used as a principal place of residence by the recipient or a relative of the recipient.

All these conditions must be satisfied at the time of settlement of the transaction. If any of them are not satisfied at the time of settlement, the supply must be taxed at 15%.

Leases for dwellings and most commercial leases are excluded from this definition. For more information about the zero-rating of land transactions see our Interpretation Statement 17/08.

Land acquired by not-for-profit organisations

Land acquired by a not-for-profit organisation in New Zealand may be zero-rated if it's used for making taxable supplies.

Sale of going concern

A sale of a going concern by one registered person to another registered person is zero-rated.

The sale is also zero-rated when only part of a taxable activity (able to operate separately) is sold as a going concern.

To be a going concern, the sale must meet the following criteria:

- It must be the supply of the whole or stand-alone part of a taxable activity, from one registered person to another.
- It must be the supply of all the goods and services necessary for the continued operation of the activity.
- Both parties must agree that there is a supply of a going concern, and record this agreement in a document.
- Both parties must intend the activity is capable of being carried on as a going concern by the purchaser.
- The business must be a going concern at the time of supply and carried on up to the time of the transfer to the purchaser.

For example, Paul sells his dairy farm, including land, herd, all buildings and machinery to another GST-registered farmer. This is a sale of a going concern.

If he had sold the land and building but kept the machinery and the herd, it would not be a going concern. The sale of the land and buildings may still be zero-rated.

Supplies to foreign-based pleasure craft

Zero-rating applies to:

- Goods supplied for use on a foreign-based pleasure craft that cause or enable the craft to sail, or goods that ensure the safety of passengers and crew. This applies to foreign-based pleasure craft in New Zealand under a temporary import entry issued by the New Zealand Customs Service (Customs)
- The supply of consumable stores for use outside New Zealand on foreign-based pleasure craft departing New Zealand. The zero-rating applies to the final provisioning of consumable stores. Foreign-based pleasure craft are defined as those pleasure craft in New Zealand as temporary imports under Customs legislation.

Consumable stores are goods passengers and crew on board intend to consume, and those necessary to operate or maintain the pleasure craft, including fuel and lubricants but excluding spare parts and equipment.

Before zero-rating, a supplier of maritime goods and consumable stores must be satisfied the goods and stores are for a foreign-based pleasure craft, and the craft is departing New Zealand.

Goods and services - temporary imports

The most common services are repairs and maintenance.

Materials used to repair a temporary import, and become an integral part of the import, are zero-rated. Similarly, if the repair materials become worthless for anything else after the repair job, the materials are zero-rated.

Anyone supplying goods or services to a temporary import must keep supporting documentation confirming the Customs status of the temporary import. This may include evidence that they do not need to register with Customs.

For example, a New Zealand-owned boat normally operating in the Cook Islands, is put into dry dock in New Zealand for repairs. Any services involved in the repair would be zero-rated if the boat is temporarily imported.

Transport of goods to and from New Zealand

Zero-rated services include the international journey, and any transport within New Zealand (including loading and unloading costs), as long as it's part of the international transport and is supplied by the same person or agent.

These other services in relation to international transportation are also zero-rated:

- insuring or arranging insurance
- arranging the transport.

Transport of people to and from New Zealand

Zero-rating applies to the transport of passengers, including the international journey and any air travel within New Zealand if it is:

- part of the international carriage
- booked at the same time as the international journey
- provided through the same agent or supplier.

For example, Kate buys a single air ticket for flights from Napier to Auckland, then on to Perth. GST is not charged on either flight as the travel is a contract for international carriage.

Part 4 - Special supplies

Special supplies are different from the normal business sales or purchases.

Agents

Special rules apply if a New Zealand agent who is registered for GST acts on behalf of a non-resident principal who is outside New Zealand, and not registered for GST.

New Zealand agent buying supplies for a non-resident principal

The agent may, in certain circumstances, claim GST incurred when importing or exporting goods to or from New Zealand or arranging transportation.

Non-resident principal contracts services agent to sell and distribute their goods

In some cases a non-resident, non-registered principal may wish to sell goods in New Zealand but does not want to have a place of business here. They may contract the services of an agent to sell and distribute their goods.

If the New Zealand GST-registered agent and the principal agree, the agent will be responsible for returning GST on the sale of the goods rather than the non-resident. The agent will be able to claim GST incurred when importing the goods into New Zealand.

Art gallery

A non-resident art gallery decides to sell several pieces of art in New Zealand. The gallery arranges for a GST-registered agent in New Zealand to carry out the sale. The agent agrees to act as the supplier and importer of the artwork, rather than the art gallery. The agent may claim for any GST paid to import the goods and is responsible for charging GST on the sale of the artwork in New Zealand.

Coin and token-operated machines

These rules do not apply to gaming machines.

Coin-operated machines

If you supply goods or services through any coin-operated device or machine, for example, a video game, snack machine or parking meter, you must account for the total value of the coins removed from the machine. Include the amount in the return covering the date you removed the coins.

Token-operated machines

If you supply goods or services through a token-operated device or machine, you account for GST on the tokens in the same way as other tokens, stamps or vouchers - as a supply when the customer buys them.

If you receive business goods or services through a coin or token-operated machine, you may claim a GST credit in the period you paid the money.

Exported secondhand goods

If you claim a GST input credit for secondhand goods you bought and those goods are going to be exported, the full amount of the goods can be zero-rated if you meet 2 conditions before the goods are entered for export:

- the goods must leave New Zealand within 28 days of the time of supply, and
- the recipient must provide a declaration (for example, in the sale and purchase agreement or other sales document) at or before the time of supply, neither they nor an associated person will cause the goods to be re-imported to New Zealand in the same condition in which they were exported.

If both these conditions are not met, you must account for the GST input credit you've claimed in myIR by adding this back as a debit adjustment in your GST return (Box 9 if you file paper returns). It does not matter which accounting basis you use - you must include these details in your return:

- the sale or invoiced amount of the sale under Sales and Income (Box 5 for paper returns)
- the same amount in zero-rated supplies (Box 6 for paper), as long as you hold evidence of export
- 3/23 of the full purchase price of the exported secondhand goods as a debit adjustment under 'Other' (Box 9 for paper returns).

Example

Secondhand dealer, Tom, buys antique pieces for $405 and $515 from a non-registered person and claims 3/23 of these amounts, totalling $120. He sells them to an Australian company for $2,200. The antiques leave New Zealand within 28 days of Tom purchasing them, and a declaration is signed by the Australian purchaser neither they, nor an associated person will re-import the goods into New Zealand. As the supply is zero-rated, GST is charged at the rate of 0%. Tom shows the following in his return:

- $2,200 in total sales (Box 5 for paper returns)
- $2,200 in zero-rated supplies (Box 6 for paper returns).

Costs in raising capital funds

You can claim for GST input tax incurred on supplies of financial services made to raise funds intended for expenditure in your taxable activity, to the extent the capital funds your taxable activity.

It does not apply to persons who principally make supplies of financial services.

Example

A building company sells shares to purchase a development property that will be 80% commercial and 20% residential incurs $6,900 (including GST of $900) in expenses to sell the shares. The company claims $720 (80% GST for the commercial property). This would be subject to further adjustment if the estimated use differs from the actual use.

Emissions Trading Scheme

The supply of these emissions units is zero-rated for GST:

- New Zealand units
- Kyoto-compliant units
- approved overseas units
- certain 'grey list' or 'voluntary' units, for example, voluntary carbon standard units and gold standard units.

The supply of emissions units made under the Emissions Trading Scheme (ETS) or the Permanent Forest Sink Initiative (PFSI) is also zero-rated.

Standard GST rules still apply to the supply of units such as fuel costs created in the normal course of a business.

Post-1989 forest land owners/permanent forest sink initiative (PFSI) participants

If you receive allocations of emissions units under post-1989 forest ownership or a PFSI, you make a supply of carbon removal services as consideration for the units. Include these services as zero-rated supplies in your GST returns.

If an unincorporated body receives an allocation of units or if multiple legal owners receive an allocation from one NZ Emissions Unit Register (NZEUR) holding account, the GST-registered body/group makes the supply to the Crown. Individuals in the allocation group do not make or receive a supply.

Summary table

The following table sets out the different types of emissions units transactions and their GST treatment.

Transaction	from/to	GST treatment
Common transactions - New Zealand Units, Kyoto-compliant units and approved overseas units
All supplies of emissions units	prior to 1/1/09	standard-rated
All supplies of services (deemed or actual) made in exchange for emissions units	prior to 1/1/09	standard-rated
Transfer of emissions units by government	1/1/09 onwards	zero-rated
All supplies of services (deemed or actual) made in exchange for emissions units transferred by government	1/1/09 onwards	zero-rated
Surrender of emissions units	1/1/09 onwards	zero-rated
Supply of New Zealand units and Kyoto-compliant emissions units not involving the government	1/1/09 onwards	zero-rated
Voluntary units
All supplies of voluntary units	prior to 1/4/10	standard-rated
All supplies of services (deemed or actual) made in exchange for voluntary units	at all times	standard-rated
All supplies of voluntary units	1/4/10 onwards	zero-rated
Transactions involving the government outside the Emissions Trading Scheme
Transfer of emissions units by government	1/1/09 to 6/10/09	zero-rated
Supplies of services (deemed or actual) made in exchange for emissions units transferred by government	1/1/09 to 6/10/09	standard-rated
Transfer of emissions units by government under PFSI	6/10/09 onwards	zero-rated
Supply of services (deemed or actual) made in exchange for emissions units transferred by the government under PFSI	6/10/09 onwards	zero-rated
Transfer of emissions units by government	6/10/09 onwards	standard-rated

For further information see the Tax Information Bulletin, Part II, Vol 21, No 8 (October/November 2009).

Foreign currency payments

If you are paid for goods or services in a foreign currency, convert the amount to New Zealand dollars using the exchange rate for the date of the GST time of supply.

To claim a GST credit you must hold taxable supply information such as an invoice in New Zealand currency.

GST on imported services - reverse charge

When you import services from a non-resident supplier you'll usually not be charged GST if you let them know you're also GST registered. However, if you then use some or all of those services for something other than your taxable activity, you'll need to account for the GST on the non-taxable use. You add GST to the price of the services you've received, and include it as income in your GST return. This is called a 'reverse charge'.

If you were charged GST at the rate of 0% (zero-rated) you will need to make an adjustment if you use the services for non-taxable use.

When you acquire the services, if you estimate your taxable use of the services will be less than 95% of total use, then you'll be treated as if you supplied the services yourself in the course of your taxable activity. You'll need to add GST to the cost of those services and include them in your GST return.

You'll also be able to claim as an expense the GST-inclusive cost of the imported services, in proportion to your estimate of their taxable use.

You'll also need to account for the GST reverse charge on imported services if you find at the end of an adjustment period your taxable use of an imported service was less than 95%. This is also done by adding GST to the cost of the service and including it in the relevant GST return. You also claim as an expense the GST-inclusive cost in proportion to your actual taxable use.

Example

Melissa is a GST-registered self-employed publicist. She purchases a graphics software package from a non-resident supplier for $400, and because she identifies herself as GST registered she is not charged GST on the purchase. She estimates the software will be used 50% for her business and 50% for home use.

Under the reverse charge rule, Melissa is treated as supplying the software package to herself for $460 ($400 plus $60 GST). She includes this amount as income in her GST return. However, she can also claim half of the amount as an expense, to reflect her business use of the software. She does this by claiming $230 ($200 plus $30 GST) as an expense in the same GST return.

For information about GST on supplies of remote services see Tax Information Bulletin (TIB), Vol 28, No 6 (July 2016).

Lotteries and other games of chance

If you run raffles, lotteries, or other games of chance, you must account for the proceeds of the lottery (for example, total sales of tickets or cards) less the total amount of cash prizes.

Example

Total proceeds of a raffle were $1,070 (535 tickets at $2 each).

Cash prizes were:

1st	$ 500
2nd	$ 200
3rd	$ 100
Total	$ 800
Total proceeds	$ 1,070
Cash prizes	$ 800
Difference	$ 270

You must include Sales and income of $270 (Box 5 for paper returns) covering the return period the raffle was drawn.

If one raffle has multiple draws, account for the GST in the return covering the date of the first draw.

You can claim GST for the cost of non-cash prizes in the normal way.

GST on assets sold by not for profits

Generally, GST input credits can be claimed for the purchase of an asset or for expenses including GST relating to that asset.

Where input credits are claimed, the asset will be considered part of the GST activity.

In these situations, GST output tax will be payable on the disposal of the asset or an equivalent event (for example, an insurance pay-out in the event of a fire).

Since 1 April 2019, not-for-profit businesses have a 24-month transition period to elect to remove an asset so it is not part of their GST taxable activity.

Any GST input credits claimed for the asset will need to be repaid.

The election needs to provide details of the asset, calculation of input credits being repaid and period of election.

Elections should be sent to Charities.queries@ird.govt.nz

Telecommunications – mobile roaming services

Outbound mobile roaming services

These are mobile roaming services used outside New Zealand by a person with a New Zealand registered mobile device, and their usual mobile network is in New Zealand. These services are subject to GST of 15%.

Inbound mobile roaming services

These are mobile roaming services used by a non-resident who is in New Zealand and their usual mobile network is outside New Zealand. These services are zero-rated for GST if supplied by a resident or treated as being made outside New Zealand (and so not subject to GST) if supplied by a non-resident.

GST on goods purchased on deferred payment term

Generally, a person who is registered for GST on a payments basis can claim input tax deductions only when payment has been made. This includes goods purchased under a standard sales agreement or goods purchased on a 'buy now, pay later' basis.

However:

- If a person has entered into a hire purchase agreement for the purchase of goods, they can claim a full input tax deduction when they enter into the agreement.
- If a person has entered into a layby sales agreement for the purchase of goods, they can claim an input tax deduction only when property in the goods is transferred, typically after the final payment has been made.

Summary – for payments basis persons
Type of agreement	When an input tax deduction can be claimed
Standard sales agreement	When and to the extent that payment has been made.
'Buy now, pay later' (BNPL) agreement	Typically, when the agreement is entered into as the BNPL provider pays for the supply in full.
Hire purchase agreement	When the agreement is entered into.
Layby sales agreement	When property in the goods is transferred, typically after final payment has been made.

Part 5 - GST and koha

If your koha is an unconditional gift you do not have to pay GST on it. An unconditional gift is a voluntary payment to a not-for-profit organisation that does not benefit the payer or giver in the form of goods or services.

If the koha, such as payments, goods or services are not an unconditional gift they are liable for GST.

Deciding if your koha is liable for GST

The unconditional gift rule will help you decide whether your koha is liable for GST. We've added some examples based on a not-for-profit marae registered for GST.

GST on marae member payments

When a marae member gives money, goods or a service (koha) to their marae and expects nothing in return, then it is not subject to GST or liable for income tax.

Types of payments not taxed are:

- money given to bereaved family or committee at a tangihanga or hura kōhatu
- money given to a married couple or committee at a mārena
- koha given to a marae committee to assist in paying for a building, house or church
- visitors on a marae giving a collection to donate to the marae committee.

Types of payments that must be taxed are:

- a government department giving payment on a marae
- tourists given a tour on a marae for a fee
- fund raising activities by marae committee
- a marae building is made available for a function in exchange for koha.

Koha given to the tangata whenua

A group of people arrange to stay on your marae for a couple of nights at no charge by your marae. The group gives a koha to the tangata whenua at the pōwhiri.

The koha is an unconditional gift and is not liable for GST. It's unconditional because the payment was voluntary and not given for goods or services.

Staff workshop on your marae

A company holds a 2-day staff workshop for thirty people on your marae. You charge a $50 per person, per day fee. You must charge GST, because the money is paid for the goods and services supplied by you. You can claim GST on all goods and services you purchase to host this workshop.

Participants give a koha after staff workshop

After the workshop (in the last example) some of the participants give a koha to you in appreciation of the hospitality shown. As this koha is not for goods and services you have supplied and gives no direct benefit to the payers/giver, it is an unconditional gift and not liable for GST.

If your marae is not registered for GST, it cannot charge GST for any goods and services they supplied and cannot claim GST back on goods and services they pay for.

Part 6 - Non-resident businesses and GST

The GST rules for non-residents depend on the circumstances of the business. For full details, go to ird.govt.nz/nrgst

Supplying goods or services in New Zealand

A non-resident business carrying on a taxable activity and making supplies of goods or services in New Zealand, may be required to register for GST. The business will need to charge GST on its sales and can claim back GST on its business expenses.

Supplying remote services

Non-resident sellers and online marketplace operators that supply remote services, such as digital content from outside New Zealand to customers resident in New Zealand, may need to register for, file, and pay GST on these supplies.

Non-resident suppliers of online gambling services who register for GST must also register for offshore gambling duty. For more information, go to ird.govt.nz/ogd

Supplying low value imported goods

From 1 December 2019, non-resident sellers, online marketplace operators and redeliverers supplying low value goods to customers in New Zealand, may need to register for, collect and return GST.

A low value good is a physical good valued at NZ$1,000 or less (excluding GST), for example clothing, cosmetics and electronic items.

Supplying listed services

From 1 April 2024, non-resident online marketplace operators facilitating the sale of short-stay and visitor accommodation, ride-sharing, and food and beverage delivery may need to register for, collect and return GST when the service is performed, provided, or received in New Zealand.

Claiming GST if you do not make taxable supplies in New Zealand

Non-resident businesses who are not making taxable supplies in New Zealand, but receive goods or services here, may be able to register for GST as a non-resident business claimant and claim back GST paid on New Zealand business expenses. To be eligible, conditions must be met.
